National populism in Visegrad countries

The International conference took place on 18th October 2011 in the Conference hall at Faculty of Social Sciences of Masaryk University. The conference hosted speakers and guests from the Czech Republic, Poland and Hungary.

During the conference the conclusions of the research project were introduced followed by the discussion concerning the recent nationalistic development in the countries of Visegrad. The most discussed issue was the national fragmentation of the Hungarian politics and the possible consequences in the region.

Below you can see couple of pictures from the conference.
